The Trail Boss and the Runaway Lori Tyler

After nineteen-year-old Winnie Freeman is forced to run away from home by the schemes of a murderer, she soon learns that Percival, Texas in 1885 is no easy place for a young woman to make it on her own. So when trail boss Adam Talbert takes an interest in her situation and offers her a job on a cattle drive, she gratefully accepts.

But when Adam questions her about her past and catches her in a lie, Winnie quickly discovers that he is not a man who will tolerate dishonesty. After taking her over his knee for a painful and humiliating bare-bottom spanking, he demands to hear the truth. To her surprise, the handsome cowboy is moved by her tale of woe, and he agrees to bring her on the drive despite the danger that may follow her.

Winnie begins learning the skills involved in cooking on the trail, and as her training under Adam's strict eye progresses she soon finds that she can't imagine a life that isn't by his side. During the long, hard ride to Abilene, Winnie's stubborn, feisty attitude earns her a sore bottom more than once, yet with each passing day Adam's feelings for her grow stronger. But can he protect her from the man that sent her fleeing from her home in the first place?
