She Said No To The Wind Cesar Moran-Cahusac

I write because I am infatuated with words, my desire is to release them giving them texture, a sound that will resonate deeply in people's core like a bell that awakens the soul. In this word voyage I hope my voice becomes yours; allowing this recital to ignite appreciation for life and nature, offering the human spirit a path to change life attitudes. Words intrinsically give us the force to express any situation from the most mundane to the enlightened, they emanate from me like a fountain from which we can become agents for change. For every book that is sold, I will donate a dollar towards the implementation and development of a tree nursery that will be the seed for an urban reforestation project in the city of Cusco, Peru. - César Morán-Cahusac

César Morán-Cahusac (www.cesarmorancahusac) is an ecologist, peace advocate and martial artist whose poetry weaves an expansive range of exotic, sensual and surprising life experiences into a dance of verbal refinement. From pig farmer to poet, from Sensei to CEO, from dreamer to truth-seeker, a man without energy and enthusiasm, he certainly is not. "Wuthering wind came and blasted her with words and she said No. The wind was bringing up storms, chasing her with arrogant bluffs and she said No" She Said No to the Wind is Cesar's first poetry anthology.
