The Zero-Waste House: An Invention to Transform Home Building Globally Robert Gary

This book is about how to make a house out of aluminum with zero waste.

The aluminum companies and the modular home, and pre-fab home builders, and the military, and big corporations would be the first group of likely readers of this book, starting with organizations like Alcoa, and the U.S. Air Force.

But this book will also be of major interest to any organization that lends money for homes, or home building, or a business engaged in home building. Any bank that does mortgage lending, for example, will find breakthrough innovations in this book.

Finally, people interested in saving the Earth, having less waste, creating less landfill, creating less carbon pollution, living lighter on the Earth, with a smaller less harmful footprint, and saving the land, will find great joy in this, short, plain, easy to read, illustrated book
