Wisdom Superbook Book 11. Friendship Guide (Make Friends by Being One) Tony Kelbrat

I wrote this book because I was reminiscing about my life. At least six good friends have already passed on. My other real good bosom-buddy kindred spirit friends live all over the world. I suppose I could contact them by finding them on the internet but I'm a male. I accept my life right here, right now. What I had with my friends was in the past. It doesn't make me feel any less a longing for those easygoing, friendly fun times of youth but I accept my life and wrote this book as a homage to any friendship anywhere.

Youth is a time for running around, doing things for fun. As you get older, you get more loner because older people aren't accepted anywhere unless it's with other older people.

I always get a sad twinge when I listen to Paul Simon's Old Friends or Neil Diamond's song about friends and think friends are probably the most valuable thing you can have in life. They're not like lovers because there is always a factor of sex involved. With friends it's just people liking each other purely for who they are.

So this is my little homage to friendship. The first part is romantic mushy stuff then I move into the modern day search for friends, how to find new ones, penpals, using social media, etc.

We all have existential loneliness regardless of how intimate and close we think we are to other people. Even the closest among us are Universes apart so take it easy no matter what.

Relationships with all other people are a roller coaster. You could be close and intimate with your lover right now then tonight she's like in outer space, totally detached from you but then she comes around again tomorrow.

I simply made peace with God. I said God lives inside of me. I will honor who He created me to be and that's it. I don't have to feel lonely anymore. Just live by my pact with the Great Creator. That's the best anyone can do.

People have kids because they think they will be loyal to them and keep them company when they feel lonely but most kids will go their own way.

Nothing is promised beyond today. Try to release your natural love right now.

How To Make Friends

Put people at ease. Be a warm individual or at least act like one. Develop a rapport with people.

Make friends by being a friend. Be kind, gentle, friendly, help people, inspire them, be useful and listen to them when they talk to you.

People think they're more advanced, cute, cool and special than they actually are so your job is to help them along with this delusion.

To me a friend is someone I can relate to in a real way who wants to have easy time together and good conversation about nothing in particular.

I don't get very deep with most people beyond intellectual conversation as a hobby but the operative word for true friendship is to really care about someone.

A friend is someone who doesn't care if you look like a nerd, they will be nice to you no matter what.

If I meet someone somewhere, I will make a few innocuous neutral or pleasant comments then say something from the latest headline and if they want to talk, they will answer back and in a few minutes, we will be exchanging good conversation. If they don't, that's fine. I don't need to talk to strangers.

When people meet you for the first time, they're thinking is he or she an ass or a cool person? Don't be an ass. Try to come off as an easygoing, unassuming person.

A lot of people think other people are spending their time thinking about them but the truth is that we're all spending our time thinking about ourselves so if you spend time with someone acting like you're thinking about how special they are, you will make a friend.

Help people, talk nicely, listen and they will befriend you. The secret to making friends and influencing people is to take the focus away from you and put it on whomever you're with.

Don't go overboard with phony praise, just be a nice person, show interest in others, like them.
