StellarPores Maxi PadMe, S. G. Memon

Maxi PadMe's parody of Star Wars is an half-assed look at how many corny jokes can be made in a paragraph rather than a story that needs to be told. Predictably, the jokes are raunchy, campy, with a side of oh no that's so lame. This is the lamest thing I've read in a long time and I've read the IRS tax code. -- Dough Boy.

Maxi PadMe's StellarPores, which makes fun of Star Wars and virtually any other science fiction world has enjoyed a non-cult following since it's release 2 milliseconds ago. The premise is simple, like the book, Forever Alone (ersatz Han Solo with his own furry friend called Carpet) pits his strength against Black Head who is out to destroy the entire universe for his dastardly wants in the quest for acne-free smooth skin. The relentless barrage of stupid humor that dips into popular songs and televisions shows makes you laugh and weep and occasionally want to pee. It lampoons, lamps and poons (prunes eaten by Hahvahd grads) and should cause a couple of heart of attacks from snickering too much. The quality is non-existent but helps to sell the hope that this will make someone crack a smile. This is a novel that tries to be something and succeeds - it's trashy humor at it's absolute worst which makes it so enjoyable.

Believe in the farce because it's in this "hysterically tribute to stellar science fiction". When the evil Black Head's face pops up with acne, he has no where to turn by Planet Zombie to get their "special" mud but the only thing between him and it is the Zombie Princess Diana, a mopey pirate named Forever Alone, and a half-man/half-rug called Carpet. They are prepared to reckon with the forces of evil. But the axis of evil of darkness closes in on them at meth-like speed. However our heros have Yoga, the master of the mysterious force called BO which he embraces and emanates to wag war on the side of capitalism and to rule the galaxy for good.
