From Preface to the Fourth Edition: "...In the period of almost 20 years since the publication of the former addition, the law has undergone substantial changes and developments. The vocabulary of the law has shown corresponding change and growth. A word, and the often quoted dictum of Mr. Justice Holmes, is the skin of a living thought, and the words of statutes and judicial opinions reflect contemporary thinking of legislators and jurists. In order adequately to represent this thinking, a patient examination has been made of the thousands of opinions handed down by the appellate courts each year. Abbreviations of common words and phrases likely to be encountered by the user are explained in appropriate places throughout the main body of the work. A table of abbreviations of the titles of law reports, textbooks, and other legal literature is contained in the back of this volume...."
