Crawford Wick is a recent college dropout working a mindless part time job and living with his overbearing mother. In the six months since a bad situation prompted him to suddenly drop out, regret and frustration has led to his relationships deteriorating. His disillusionment grows even further after a bad car accident leaves him temporarily unable to work. As he begins to reexamine his current circumstances, he begins his quest for a fresh start. Inspired by the Lost Generation expatriates of the early twentieth century, Crawford ultimately sets his sights on a move to Paris. In the course of his preparations, Crawford's experiences lead to the development of a valuable new perspective of his life. As he comes to realize that he alone has control of his own destiny, Crawford struggles with his newfound motivation and responsibility. Men Don't Wear Makeup is the examination of one young man's capacity to deal with his own perceptions of the world as he overcomes a personal tragedy. It's a latent coming of age story that provides unique insight into a young adult growing into a man and realizing his true potential to find his own path.
