When a magician and a lady cross swords, there can be only one result. Or can there?

The king summons his magician to attend him at Court, unaware the magician has died. It is the magician's apprentice who attends, a young man desperate to prove himself as powerful as his master. But when he approaches the castle a young lady's careless comment cuts him to the quick. It is a wound he cannot forget and will not forgive

The lady compensates for her poverty and lack of rank with looks and a ready wit, chafing at the restrictions of Court life but ever aware that she must marry or lose everything.

Neither the magician nor the lady can afford to fall in love.

When the magician casts his spell of revenge he finds himself snared in his own net, bound by the rules of his own magic. Is he clever enough to outwit himself?

A bittersweet tale of wit, misunderstandings and unintended consequences.
